You're in the middle of doing dishes when your phone rings. You answer it, and it's "the IRS." Sound familiar?

Since 2013, taxpayers have lost upwards of $60 million to IRS imposter scams.

How does the scam work? When the fraudsters call they claim you owe a specific amount in taxes and threaten to arrest you if you do not pay immediately. The caller may know part of your Social Security number. The caller ID might even say IRS!

"The caller may know part of your SS number..."

Don't fall for these scams. The IRS will never call and demand immediate payment. If they need to be paid, they will first send a notice through the mail.

Plus, the IRS will never ask for credit or debit cards over the phone.

If you get a call like this, hang up immediately! Think you may owe taxes? Call the IRS directly at 800-829-1040.

You can also contact AARP's Fraud Watch Helpline for assistance at 877-908-3360.
